The new group of credentialed individuals who have been awarded the distinctive C.C.W.P. designation include doctors practicing in a range of locations, including the United States, Canada, and Australia. The twenty-four Doctors of Chiropractic successfully completed their program coursework and other requisites and passed a comprehensive final examination administered through the ICA Council on Wellness Science. These newly certified doctors are listed in two sections of the ICA Sciences Councils Referral Directory, and are included in the highlighted listing with the other C.C.W.P. doctors who have maintained their credentialing for listing in the Wellness Science Membership Referral Directory.

"These doctors are uniquely equipped to fill an important lifestyle and public health gap in their communities by becoming a sound, authoritative source of evidence-based wellness living strategies," says ICA President, Gary L. Walsemann. "The C.C.W.P. Certification gives practitioners practical research and science-based data in a growing field that is increasingly relevant because it addresses important health issues in a context where chiropractors already do excel." The multi-faceted seminar program is offered at multiple locations through the International Chiropractors Association (ICA) who works in partnership with Life Chiropractic College West, an internationally acclaimed chiropractic college, to present the teaching program.

"This C.C.W.P. credential recognizes these doctors' accomplishments in successfully completing the demanding course work and examination process for this special credential designation," notes Dr. James Chestnut, who developed the certification program curriculum and teaches modules in the seminar series.

WELLNESS COUNCIL REFERRAL DIRECTORY EXPANDS ITS REACH:

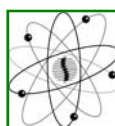

The ICA Council on Wellness Science membership database is a featured component of the growing outreach resources through the International Chiropractors Association website at www.chiropractic.org and other outlets, and is a highlighted element of the International Chiropractors Association Science Councils Referral Directory system. Features now include regional and alphabetical search tools plus time zone conversion links for different locations around the globe. The Wellness Council Membership Referral Directory includes regional listings for member doctors plus highlighted directory features for those holding the CCWP certification — accessible through the Council web pages at www.chiropractic.org/wellness.

Wellness Certification Exam Cycles Set for 2010!

The Certification Final Examination for the C.C.W.P. credential is administered in testing cycles over the year for candidates who completed their program requisites. The online test launch dates for 2010 work around the onsite seminars and include deadlines for submitting any outstanding home study module work to participate as a candidate in a particular exam cycle. For more information visit the Certification updates posted on the web or email questions to wellness@chiropractic.org.
